

Who we are —

Since the late 1980s we've been the premier source of factual, objective information about radar detectors and speed enforcement technology. Our staff has conducted more tests of radar detectors and laser countermeasures—not to mention police radar guns and lasers—than any group in the nation.

The leader of our pack is Craig Peterson, perhaps best known as the author of two books and hundreds of magazine stories on these subjects. He's a police radar instructor and a nationally-recognized expert on radar and radar detectors.

As an industry consultant, his was the first company to conduct comparison tests of police radar and lasers for their manufacturers.

Radartest was also the first to develop testing programs for laser jammers, radar detector detectors and other mobile electronics.

Radartest.com isn't the typical Web sales site: It carries comparatively few products. Why? Because our motto is: We test every product we sell. As the only site that rigorously tests these countermeasures, we know that only a few are capable of protecting your driver's license. And those are the ones we sell.